

Nearest same-superpopulation neighbor in displayed MDS space

Each sequence-level subtelomeric point contributes one D1–D2 Euclidean distance to its nearest other point from the same continental superpopulation.

Lower values mean each subtelomere has a closer same-superpopulation neighbor in sequence-similarity MDS space.
Self is excluded; no centroid/all-pairwise average. Pseudo-log x-axis shows near-zero values and sparse outliers.